nattnare 14.02.2022 15:59. A: The data is being read in via $.get() and in a string variable. The data is being read in as a string. var mystring = $.get("myurl", null, function(data){ var $html = $("#dbcont").html(data); $("#dbcont").html($html); }); When the data is received, it is being stored in the variable mystring and then stored into the div #dbcont. $html = "" + mystring + ""; As you can see, $html is being stored as a string literal. This is the root of your issue. You need to use the mystring variable as your $html string: $html = "" + mystring + ""; Alternately, if you stored the mystring variable as a variable, you would need to access it as $html = $("#dbcont").html(mystring); var mystring = $.get("myurl", null, function(data){ var $html = $("#dbcont").html(data); $("#dbcont").html($html);
