Category:Lists of variety television series episodes Category:Taiwanese drama television seriesSUMMARY OF WORK Human skin is an attractive target for gene therapy due to its accessibility, immunogenicity, and potential for gene-based therapies to prevent or treat disease. Numerous animal studies have shown the potential of skin as a gene therapy target, with correction of epidermal permeability barrier defects, keratinocyte growth factor expression, and correction of diabetes. In mice, it has been shown that wild type human fibroblasts can provide stem cells for cutaneous wound healing, and that fibroblast-derived stem cells were as effective as peripheral blood stem cells in wound repair. The potential for human skin to serve as a source of stem cells was later verified in humans: primitive stem cells were found in the cutaneous dermis that expressed the stem cell marker c-Kit, and these dermal stem cells could be cultured in vitro and show multilineage differentiation potential. These results support the
