An indirect immunoperoxidase technique for localizing antigens on peripheral nerve and muscle sarcolemma is described. Muscle membranes were pretreated with neuraminidase, a detergent (Triton X-100), and sialidase to alter or eliminate carbohydrate components, and the location of antigens on muscle membranes was assessed by use of rabbit antisera to purified chicken gizzard myosin or smooth muscle myosin. Myosin antigen was localized on muscle membrane after neuraminidase pretreatment, but it was substantially depleted by sialidase pretreatment. Conversely, the distribution of antigens on muscle membranes after pretreatment with sialidase was consistent with the presence of carbohydrate components which differed from those
