The body is believed to be that of missing businesswoman Sabine Dordel of Antwerp, Belgium. Police are investigating reports that the plane's landing gear was up in the crash at a small airfield near Amsterdam Airport on Tuesday night. It is thought the plane had just taken off from Amsterdam and was heading for the small airfield when it hit some wires. (Image: REUTERS) (Image: Getty Images Europe) (Image: EPA) A pilot reported seeing the flaps of the plane were deployed and the runway had signs for a double length taxiway. Other plane spotters told Dutch newspaper Het Financieele Dagblad that they had heard a small plane take off from the runway and "hit the ground with a shudder". The newspaper said that the crashed plane was a Saab 340 twin turboprop aircraft and that they were told it had made the trip to Amsterdam Airport many times before. The plane was Belgian registered and was manufactured in 1992. The family of Ms Dordel, 54, have paid tribute to her, saying: "In a short time Sabine will be a part of the family of the Baars.
