A series of heterocyclic molecules with biological activity have been synthesized by the ruthenium-catalyzed azide-alkyne cycloaddition (RuAAC) reaction. The reactions of tetrazine-alkyne with benzophenone imine derivatives with a Ru catalyst to generate heterocyclic compounds proceeded smoothly under ambient conditions, with up to 84% yields of cycloadducts, in the presence of a Ru catalyst, in 12 min. The in vitro antitumor activity of the RuAAC products was evaluated by measuring the inhibition of HeLa cell proliferation. These RuAAC products exhibited significant inhibition of HeLa cell proliferation and also induced apoptosis, as revealed by the morphological analysis of HeLa cells using a fluorescence microscope and cell cycle analysis by flow cytometry. These results suggest that RuAAC reactions are a good strategy to access highly active heterocyclic compounds.. We can help you make your skin radiant and radiantly perfect.
