Interstitial deletion of the long arm of chromosome 15 has not been well described in children. Most cases in this category have been diagnosed by means of chromosomal analysis, with or without subtelomeric fluorescence in situ hybridization studies. We describe a 4-year-old child with a 0.5-year history of language impairment and progressive cognitive and social development, in whom cytogenetic studies showed a partial deletion of 15q11q13. Our patient had an unexpected mild but progressive sensory neural hearing loss. Only three previous cases of sensory neural hearing loss have been reported in patients with 15q deletion. Although we cannot formally exclude a coincidental association, the fact that our patient had interstitial deletion of chromosome 15 and a rare but well-defined otoacoustic emission test profile suggests that the two conditions are causally related
