What to Look for When Hiring a Commercial Plumber Commercial plumbing can range from a very simple task to very complex, depending on the size of your company and the type of facility you have. Some facilities may have up to eight or more different outlets and fixtures such as sinks, toilets, urinals, showers and more. Some may have gas, steam and hot water piping and a dedicated gas line. Some may even have an industrial or commercial laundry facility. Even the most basic commercial plumbing job could require an immense amount of work. One of the most common problems that commercial plumbing contractors are called out to is bathroom renovation. According to the American Society of Interior Designers, bathroom renovations make up 42 percent of the market, which accounts for over half a billion dollars per year. A bathroom renovation can range from making the tiling better to repurposing the space or converting it to a powder room, depending on the existing layout. The amount of work that needs to be done varies greatly. When a bathroom renovation is simple, it may only require minor plumbing work such as patching a leaky faucet. When a bathroom is complete with multiple sinks, toilets, basins and showers, or has been renovated into an oversized shower and tub, there may be significant work that needs to be done. A company that specializes in commercial plumbing has the tools and knowledge to handle any job, from residential to industrial to commercial.
