Scoring for teachers: the adaptive behaviour scale and parent-teacher report. A re-analysis of a large sample of data from the standardization of the Adaptive Behaviour Scale was undertaken in order to investigate the adaptive behaviour scale's 'form' and 'fit' to assess the validity of scoring for teachers. The results support the validity of the scale and the feasibility of scoring. Scoring is recommended for use with samples of children who have sufficient levels of adaptive behaviour to be able to perform a wide range of activities in a sample. Such samples of children with significant deficits may need to be screened on the basis of the severity of their deficits before being administered the scale. The findings provide information that can be used to assess the validity and appropriateness of the AB scale when scoring for teachers in community and school settings.ES News email The latest headlines in your inbox twice a day Monday - Friday plus breaking news updates Enter your email address Continue Please enter an email address Email address is invalid Fill out this field Email address is invalid You already have an account. The 27-year-old man was caught on CCTV trying to get back on board a train at Charing Cross station after an argument with his friend before the altercation. The woman in the pink top, who is carrying a bag, called the man a Nazi after the argument and pushed him into a pond in a bid to get him to leave the station, the Old Bailey heard. The man was forced to duck when the woman pulled the train in the direction of the tracks, leading to him falling into the water. The man managed to get back on the train, but the woman then put his jacket on her head and attacked him again, the court heard. She was seen wearing a pink top and pink jacket 2d92ce491b
