This means, it should check for first object and update the values for this object. This should continue for second object and so on... A: Loop the array from index 0 to the end, for each index... Loop the index from the first object (current position) to the end (you can use one of the.pop() and.shift() methods to take the object off the array and it's position off the array). If it is an Object, then update the values of each property If it is an Object, you must loop through the keys of the object, since there is no method such as Object.keys() Note: All the examples are based on the assumption that the array is a reference to an Array const arr = [{ "a": 1, "b": 2, "c": 3, "d": 4 }, { "a": 5, "b": 6, "c": 7
