The Man-made River Valley Trail stretches 20-miles through historic towns and farms, cliff-top viewpoints, and an Appalachian town from the 1800's that was so rural, even cows didn't have to migrate to greener pastures. Here, at almost 14,000 feet, you'll reach the most popular location for hikers and visitors: Roan Mountain. I bet you didn't realize that the Appalachian Trail stretches this far! The Roan Mountain summit (11,064 ft.) was the highest point surveyed by Samuel "Elkton" Swepson, the first surveyor to map the ridge lines of the West Virginia back in 1819. The Roan is popular for its views and trails. The Blue Ridge Parkway closed road access to the mountain in 2008, which is why hikers will need to opt for the Man-made River Valley Trail to reach it. Hikers will be interested to know that this is the highest peak in our region and highest in the entire state of West Virginia. The peak is also notable because of the fact that it stands
