The firm's first offices were at 482 Court Street. It later moved to the second floor of the original Hoffman-Leeson building, the Hoffman-Leeson Building (1301 Court Street), renamed again in the 1980s as the Superior Building, and now renamed again as The Superior at Court and Cathedral. This company was called Frank R. Ross Company. The Superior Building was built in 1894 as the Superior Bank, and became the National Bank of Superior in 1903 and the Superior National Bank in 1904. The National Bank changed its name to the First National Bank of Superior in 1918. Another Superior Bank was located here for some time. Now called The Superior at Court and Cathedral, the small building was built in 1929, and was built as an office building for the firm of Frank R. Ross. After the building was purchased in 1994 by the current owners of this company, Hoffman Ash Securities Corporation, it was renovated and brought back to its current life. This bank was built in 1894 as a Commercial Savings and Loan. In 1910, the name was changed to Superior Savings & Loan Association. In 1980, the name was changed to First Superior Bank. By 1891, developers on the north side of Court Street wanted
