I am using win xp professional and my email is configured to use Yahoo Mail and all the autocad files are created in this account. When I try to open a file that was created in a different account by mistake, it gives an error that the file is from a different account and asks to open it and then I receive a security warning. It does not happen with old files that I had open and just that one file from the new account is causing the problem. It is not only the autocad file it is happening with all the new files from this and other accounts that are not configured. Can I block this kind of files from opening in my system? If so, how can I do it? Thanks Avatar Not really, other than considering whether or not you
