3. Migrate a DB2 schema by creating a SQL script from an existing DB2 schema, or a transaction log from an existing

DB2 schema. 4. Migrate a DB2 schema by creating a C header file containing the SQL script, translation strings and QCDB files needed to build a SQLApp for DB2 app. Features A generic schema migration tool Built-in DB2 Schema Naming Conventions Free DB2 schema migration solution Easy to use for migration T cell development in chronic myelogenous leukaemia. Chronic myelogenous leukaemia (CML) is the classical example of a neoplasm caused by a single transformed stem cell that has lost control of the differentiation program. CML is characterized by the presence of a permanently enlarged leukaemic phase and a variable myeloid phase with a predominance of myeloid derived cells. The leukaemic phase is characterized by the presence of a large clone of hematopoietic precursors derived from a single cell that has undergone clonal evolution. Molecular genetic studies have shown that CML is monoclonal (origin from a single hematopoietic stem cell), and that the BCR-ABL oncogene is the sole transforming event. The myeloid phase in CML is not homogeneous and appears to be composed of a proliferating non-differentiated myeloid clone and mature dysmyelinated myeloid cells derived from the CD34+ progenitor cell. The non-differentiated cells are characterized
