Trematoda, cestodes, nematodes, and protozoa (Giardia and Cryptosporidium) are important parasites that play significant roles in human and animal health, but few data are available for wildlife. We conducted a survey of Giardia lamblia and Cryptosporidium in the feces of several wild mammals from Indiana, USA. Giardia cysts were not detected in 36 wintering moose and deer; however, oocysts of Giardia lamblia were detected in 3.0% of the rodents collected. Cryptosporidium sp. was not detected in the feces of any of these rodents. Giardia infection was confirmed by morphological analysis of Giardia trophozoites from moose feces, which were confirmed as Giardia lamblia. The effects of Giardia on wild mammals are unknown, but research involving giardiasis in mammals is important to understanding disease transmission and the parasite's role in the health of wildlife and humans. What's the matter, Alpha Centauri? You don't think you're quite good enough for the Robot Race? Well how about one of those EXO-RACES type races where you're competitors in an electronic dance competition before a jury and thousands of spectators? We may be a long way from that but the Chinese have already got the robots in the roof running for this year's WIND Festival. The robots were the brainchild of Sanyuan Liu, who is only 20, and the concept was born during a robotics workshop at school. The large box robot displayed is a joint venture between Sanyuan and his mentor, Mr. Hui, and is known as 'ROB-A.' "When I was growing up I was passionate about mechanics and robotics," Sanyuan told the BBC. "It was very difficult to get into the institute at the time, so my parents moved me to Beijing. I needed to find a way to make some money so I started to set up small mobile phone shops and ran them for a few years, which was much eas
