KeyMacro makes it easy to record, play, stop, and delete recordings. Keymacro is a simple tool to record events from your system and save it for later use. If you have used any of the programs like Camtasia, ScreenFlow, or Recordit, this app should be familiar to you. Recording and playing back Just start the recording by clicking the record button, and you can stop recording and replay recordings by double-clicking the record button. Keymacro's interface is simple and easy to use. Just drag and drop actions from the right side into the main window. There are 4 recording modes: Auto mode: Record audio automatically when the screen is active. Auto mode with delay: Delay audio output before recording. Recording only: Record audio only when recording is enabled. Stop mode: Stop recording when recording is enabled. Playback: Set a playback speed for recordings. You can set the playback speed manually, or choose a specific speed for all recordings. Setting recording options You can set recording options such as the recording range and record audio from other applications too. To start recording, you just need to drag and drop the start button from the main window into the recording window. The recording window also has an auto start button that starts recording right away. You can stop recording either from the recording window or from the main window. You can use the delete button to delete the recorded files or press the erase button to remove all recordings from the system. Keymacro can record audio from: Sound: Start recording from audio files in the folder. Text: Start recording from text files in the folder. The recordings can be saved in the folder. To stop recording, just select Stop from the main window or the recording window. If you accidentally forget to stop the recording, you can always replay the file. Just double-click the record button and it will start replaying automatically. Troubleshooting It can be difficult to get the application to work if you do not have the right drivers installed. If you are encountering any driver related issues while trying to record, try installing the Microsoft Visual C++ Redistributable for Visual Studio 2015, or using another program like Recordit that allows you to record without the Visual C++ Redistributable. Please report any issues you run into with the application so we can improve it. Keymacro features: Auto-record from audio 1d6a3396d6
