A Macro is a set of keystrokes, command or an expression that will be performed with one keystroke. A Macro is similar to hotkeys, but unlike hotkeys, macros can be programmed using high-level scripting languages, can be recorded, and can execute sequentially. A Macro is a great way to repeat a set of keystrokes, without having to enter each one. You may be familiar with key macros if you're one of the people who have ever written their own batch scripts. A typical macro might say "Press Shift + G to paste, and then press Enter to execute", which can be very useful if you have to execute a series of commands that you often need to type in a sequence. This is the same as if you had an automated keyboard shortcut on your computer, but with a higher degree of control. A few keystrokes can be used to automate something complex like opening a folder or starting an application. You may think of a keyboard macro as a tool for configuring your Windows keyboard, but you can use it for any application. We're going to see how to program some keyboard macros in Windows 7, which will allow you to be more efficient with your everyday tasks. Import and export keystrokes First things first, let's see how to import and export key macros to be used within Windows. In Windows 7, the first step is to access the Advanced Tab in the Keyboard Shortcuts section of the Control Panel. In this tab, double click on the Hot Key option to create a new macro or to edit an existing one. The next step is to create a new macro, which is the simplest option available. Click on the Keyboard Tab and click on the + button in the bottom-right corner. Type in the name of your new macro in the Hotkey field. This should be the name you want to use for the macro in Windows 7. You can also type in a description of the macro to help you remember what the macro does. Then, press the Macro button. Do not select any other options, click OK, and then close the Keyboard Shortcuts tab. Next, you'll need to save the new key macro. To do this, open Notepad, and type in the Macro Title field the same name that you used in the Keyboard Shortcuts window. You may want to change the Macro Title field to something more descriptive, as you will use this 1d6a3396d6
