friend Tony, a very kind and hard-working blogger from Ottawa. I'm a huge fan of Tony's, and I wanted to do something for him. A little cash to do something nice for him, and it was great! For you he makes this list of his top 10 blog posts, and the top 10 posts he's written with me.

- 1.10: Crossing the Line Some years ago, Tony posted the following image: It was the first time I saw the crossing line symbol. I still don't know why he put it there. I guess he was just drawing attention to it. He was right, it is a symbolism, and, as I posted in the comments on that post, it is a symbol that should be revived.
2. I Changed My Site Host to WordPress In a reply to a comment on the previous post, Tony mentioned his new blog, GoPro on WordPress, where he posts videos from his GoPro cameras.
3. Four Lesser Known Bible Verses After he told me that the four-lesser-known-bible-verses-post he was working on, he did his research and found this list of four lesser known bible verses. He

User interface The utility reveals a well-structured suite of features and allows you to set up the calculation parameters in three steps. Hints are displayed for each step so you can quickly get an idea about how to tweak the settings.

Voltage drop calculations System Sensor Voltage Drop Calculator Serial Key offers you the possibility to create a new panel by providing information about the name and changing the voltage setting or power input setting. Plus, you create multiple panels and delete some of them. What's more, you are allowed to define a new circuit by giving details about the name, amplifier, circuit style, and AWG size settings. The application gives you the freedom to add devices from a drop-down list. You may choose between existing SpectrAlert Advance devices, as well as legacy SpectrAlert devices. In addition, you are allowed to configure the device series and type, filter results by candela, mounting, location, and color, adjust the tone and volume settings, as well as specify the desired number of units and distance between devices settings. Other important tweaks worth being mentioned enable you to create a list with favorite devices, print the panel or circuit, print all details, and save data to a file so you can import it in your future projects. Last but not least, you are allowed to provide job details that
