Related Links STOCKTON - The Inland Empire's only active homicide detective said Friday that his investigation indicates a former Duarte High teacher who allegedly tried to help his estranged wife leave a deadly accident scene is not the killer and there is no reason to think he or anyone else on the street will harm the woman, Nicole Krauss, who authorities say bludgeoned Paulette Galang to death. "There is no person out there who is out to get these two people," Stockton Detective Rick Robinson said Friday. "Right now, this is just an investigation into a homicide." On June 2, a man was pulling into a parking lot at the Golden West Shopping Center on the west side of Stockton on the report of a fatal car accident. Police said Galang was found dead beside the BMW. Robinson said police don't know the motive for the killing. "My suspicion, and I say this very carefully, is that Ms. Galang was protecting her family," he said. "The first time I have been able to determine that there are two people who wanted her dead is the day of the incident." Galang and Green were a part of the same high school classes and had a nine-year romantic relationship. On March 15, a judge in Orange County, Calif., ordered Galang and Green to stay away from one another, but their relationship continued for another two months. The judge found Galang in contempt of court for allegedly interfering with a child custody dispute between the couple and ordered that Green be allowed to stay at a police station at any time while they were apart, but no one else was allowed inside their home. Robinson said the killings are "so senseless, it's very frustrating. I can't imagine a day where I work a homicide, do a horrible death, somebody that I've known for 16 years and I lose a colleague." At one point in his career, Robinson said, he was investigating up to 200 homicides per year. Robinson said he believes Galang knew Green before the murders. "It was very cold," he said of Green's wife's killing. "Her hand was burned. It was actually burned almost down to the bone." Green is being held in San Joaquin County Jail on $3 million bail 3da54e8ca3
