Carcinoid tumor of the appendix: a case report and review of the literature. The tumor origin of carcinoid of the appendix is widely varied, depending on its extent. To our knowledge, only four cases of appendiceal carcinoid have been reported so far. A 46-year-old woman presented with a symptomatic appendix tumor without recurrence or metastasis for 20 years. The tumor was well circumscribed and multilobulated, measuring 28 x 25 mm, with a smooth surface. Microscopically, the tumors consisted of trabecular clusters of uniform polygonal cells. They were immunoreactive for cytokeratin and synaptophysin and negative for chromogranin A. Despite the negative immunohistochemical staining for chromogranin A, the tumor cells demonstrated intense cytoplasmic positivity for the vesicular monoamine transporter 2 on immunohistochemical staining. To our knowledge, the positivity for vesicular monoamine transporter 2 on the immunohistochemical staining of carcinoid of the appendix, although it has been reported in that of the endocrine tumors of the appendix and rectum. We report a case of appendiceal carcinoid with immunohistochemical and genetic analyses. Should you have a PPC campaign? AdWords only seems to work for me. I recently started a paid search campaign with one of the many internet companies that provide services to individuals like me. They do their up front work for me and I get the results I'm looking for. I'm happy with the results but the campaign is only making about $100 a month and it's been like that for a while. I tried AdWord but all it does is break my computer, so I turned it off. Should I even be using PPC, and if so, what can I do to make it work? It's a digital marketing company that I use. They have an interface that I can just enter text, images, etc into to get them to do the work for me. For example, if I wanted them to write an article about a specific topic for me, they'll do the work of researching, writing, posting, etc. They charge a monthly fee for this type of work and I can also get the same results if I use a content provider that's not affiliated with them. Your question "should I even be using PPC

Q: Как написать метод с привязкой к сохранению целевой переменной внутри метода? Есть метод с возвратом сохранения объекта `public static T Save(T obj) where T : class { T p = obj; using (var persistenceProvider = new SqlitePersistenceProvider()) { using (var context = new SqliteContext(persistenceProvider)) { context.Set().Add(p); context.SaveChanges(); } } return p; }` Здесь проблема в том, что данные которые берутся поля в объект конвертируются в значение null и наоборот. Как можно сделать возврат сохранения поля `obj.xxx`, в зависимости от его значения? Если использовать `object.xxx`, то поля будут
