KeyM... Mazu Mazu was a music file sharing software program for Macintosh and Windows PC (Windows 95/98/2000/XP). It was very popular amongst digital audio enthusiasts on the Internet. Mazu allowed two to six computers (Windows or Macintosh, depending on the version) to share a large music library. It was also possible to share recorded songs or playlists on the computers. Mazu was well-known for its powerful, fast, and easy-to-use file management system, and for its optional ability to search and automatically delete duplicate files. It also used a message-passing design for the file sharing, and allowed file transfers over the Internet as well as over the local network (using Wi-Fi, Ethernet, or serial port cable). It is no longer in active development; the last release was for version 1.2.0.1, released on August 19, 2005. However, on September 19, 2005, the software's web site was deleted and the author stopped responding to support requests. Its successor (as a music sharing program) was Freeloader, which was released for Microsoft Windows in October 2005.

New Jersey Governor Chris Christie on Tuesday told reporters in his home state that Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump was "absolutely out of control" during a debate last week. Christie told reporters at an event in New Brunswick that Trump's answer during the CNN debate last Thursday, when he said he would go to the generals on the table if he was elected president, was "out of bounds," NJ.com reported. Christie told reporters that he was glad his competitor during the presidential primary was not on the campaign trail now. He added that Trump would be unable to run the country because he doesn't "understand what it takes to run the government of the United States," Reuters reported. "I think you'd be better off with Donald Trump as your president than you would be with Hillary Clinton, because I think he is not fit to lead this country," he said. Christie said he was surprised Trump had not yet been banned from the Republican National Convention, which kicks off in Cleveland next week. "It's no secret that Donald Trump is a bully, who 77a5ca646e
