I'm assuming that parsing these lines is what's causing your slow down. Your strings are UTF-8, and Java does not know what UTF-8 is, and when it encounters a string it has to check, at some point, to see if the first half of a character (the 16 bits of the byte) are between the range of values known as "U+0000" and "U+7F". You could parse each byte of a character individually (each byte is represented in Java as a Character) rather than the full character, but parsing the string would still be slow. You need to figure out what is causing the slowdown (by displaying the relevant parts of the output and seeing where it's happening) and deal with that. [Histologic changes in the pelvic sidewall of the rabbit after bilateral ovariectomy (author's transl)]. Pelvic sidewall and fat pad of the rabbit were examined with light and electron microscopy after bilateral ovariectomy performed at 50 days of age, i.e. at the beginning of the breeding season. Ovaries and connective tissue were found in the pelvic sidewall. Electron-microscopy revealed collagen fibrils from the septa of the ovarian follicles and from 3e33713323
