KEYMACRO is a very unique program. This program has some very weird problems and the only way to get around them is to type in the EXACT numbers that are needed. I am not sure if the authors of this software did this because they are trying to go against the common trends of other freeware editors, or if they really didn't know what they were doing. But it has some quirks.

First off, it has no undo. I usually do my jobs and everything is fine. But when I finish one thing and go to do another, it remembers that first thing and places it under my cursor. There is no way to remove it. Which is fine. As long as it lets you undo and redo the first thing. You have to redo the next thing and then re-undo to put it back to normal, which is what happens in most other editors. Another strange thing about this program is that when you press a hot key, it does not activate until you are not typing anything and a tiny box pops up at the bottom of the screen. It is very distracting as there is no way to put it on a setting. So, if you are typing, it pops up. But if you want to close it you have to hit the "X" on your keyboard. When you press "f5" it opens up a window in the left corner of the screen. It shows your last 7 projects that you have started. Which is very helpful. I would like more things like this. It has some fun things to do with it. It has a very strange, very distracting feature that while you are typing, if you hold down a key and go to a new line it takes you to that line. So, if you were typing and you press a "q" it takes you to a new line with "q" in the line. Very strange and very distracting. It also has a feature where if you press ctrl+k it makes a small clock show up in the top right hand corner. It's not terribly useful. It also has a feature that allows you to create a new project for each file that you open. Which is nice, but it doesn't give you any explanation as to what you are doing when you do this. Another really strange feature is that if you are doing several different things and you press ctrl+shift+f it will create a new document in the same way as pressing "f5" does, and it allows you 77a5ca646e
