An air-fuel ratio control apparatus for an internal combustion engine is so constructed as to provide closed loop air-fuel ratio control to the engine. More specifically, it comprises a part of the engine for detecting air-fuel ratio of exhaust gas flowing therethrough, and in response to the detected air-fuel ratio, the apparatus controls the fuel supply to the engine. According to this kind of apparatus, a specific air-fuel ratio is set in response to the engine operating condition. The apparatus controls the air-fuel ratio so as to attain the set air-fuel ratio, which provides advantages of improving exhaust emission performance, for example, of engine, and of improving operability, for example, of the engine.

Conventionally, this kind of apparatus employs a method of detecting an air-fuel ratio by means of an air-fuel ratio sensor. However, since the air-fuel ratio sensor has an output characteristic that changes with the change of operation state of the engine, it has been impossible to accurately detect the air-fuel ratio at a time when the exhaust gas is being rich. As a countermeasure for this, a method is disclosed in the prior art in which a part of an intake air passage is connected to the part of the exhaust passage at a point proximate to the air-fuel ratio sensor. Exhaust gas is introduced into the side of the part of the intake passage connected to the part of the exhaust passage so that a relatively accurate air-fuel ratio is detected. With this kind of apparatus, the exhaust gas is introduced into a side of the part of the intake passage connected to the part of the exhaust passage at a point proximate to the air-fuel ratio sensor.

Therefore, in a case where a transient air-fuel ratio is detected, the air-fuel ratio is detected by using the output characteristic of the air-fuel ratio sensor in a state where the

Please do check them out! ----- I am having troubles finding the data I created for my thesis and so cannot yet submit. Please don't just disregard this post as I am stuck. Can anyone help? EDIT: I managed to get the data. Here is the link to the csv and I have also uploaded it as a zipped folder Oh, no. College football's blackouts aren't quite as black and white as they seem to be. According to Aaron Brenner, of SB Nation, Nebraska and Rutgers won't be able to play their "home" games in Lincoln, Nebraska, and New Brunswick, New Jersey, respectively, due to their embarrassing routs earlier this season: According to a report by Brenner, Nebraska and Rutgers will be required to play all of their regular season games at neutral sites. Nebraska will be playing all of its games at Sports Authority Field, while Rutgers will be playing all of its games at HighPoint.com Stadium. Because the games will be played elsewhere, Nebraska-Nebraska and Rutgers-Nebraska will be played in Lincoln. What are these schools doing? Giving fans a huge heads-up on the likelihood of a blacked-out game? Every fan in the state of Nebraska, on both sides, should be made aware that the only two state universities in the Big Ten will be playing their games in a football stadium in Kansas City, Kansas. Ah well. I guess if you are a Nebraska fan and you make it out to Lincoln to see the Cornhuskers play home games in Kansas City, you will have a pretty good time Q: How 3e33713323
