With the introduction of AutoCAD, desktop CAD became a viable product for the first time. CAD users could create 3D models on desktop computers as well as share drawings with others on the same network. The first version of AutoCAD, released in 1982, was designed for DOS and Windows. AutoCAD 2000 was released in 1996 and first available on Windows 95. AutoCAD 2007, released in October 2006, was the first version of AutoCAD available on Windows Vista. The latest version of AutoCAD is AutoCAD 2020 and was released on Windows 10 in November 2017. Version 2015 was released in September 2015, making it the newest version available to the general public. Version 2017 was released in November 2017 on Windows 10, making it the first version of AutoCAD released in the post-Windows Vista era. New features have been added to the program, such as a stereolithography module, that are available in this new release. Most updates are free, and new updates may be available for as little as $50 depending on the complexity of the features added. Updates are typically released monthly, but a major new update can be rolled out in as little as a week. This usually happens in the summer as it is easier to get people to purchase new programs in the summer than in the winter. AutoCAD is released in three editions: AutoCAD Standard, AutoCAD LT, and AutoCAD Architectural Desktop. The first two are available for free download from the Autodesk website. AutoCAD Architectural Desktop is only available for purchase, as it includes advanced features that are not yet included in the free editions. When using Architectural Desktop, a license is required for each project. Once the license is purchased, the design professional can create and manage the project from start to finish. It is the only version of the software that allows a user to easily make changes to a drawing, then have those changes automatically be saved in that same drawing. This is also known as a Drafting and Approvals Environment. AutoCAD 2016 (released November 2015) was the first version of the program to have a 64

This annual event is generally held in mid-July, so there were a number of Social Security Administration (SSA) representatives who were there, like me, to catch up with friends and colleagues in the field. SSA representatives also serve as liaisons for the agency, providing a critical role of intelligence gathering and coordination between SSA policy and program offices and their user communities. The conference attendees, including me, were all from the New York City area, representing the 50 states and the District of Columbia, with most from the Northeast and the West Coast. The SSA is an independent agency within the Department of Health and Human Services. The SSA's mission is to provide the most effective Social Security and Medicare programs possible to support seniors and people with disabilities by safeguarding their rights and improving their well-being and options. One of SSA's core values is to be open and accessible to its many constituents. The mission of the conference is to provide an open forum for SSA employees and a diverse group of customers, including representatives of Medicare contractors and vendors, to discuss recent policy decisions and 5b5f913d15

As the mayor of Lewiston, M. Patrick Brennan has overseen a city with a reputation for fiscal irresponsibility, and he has a reputation of being a tough talker. Last week he had a revelation about how to deal with the depressed economy. He decided to go on the radio and give a full-throated defense of all of the city's economic development efforts. He discussed how the city's efforts to make Lewiston attractive to businesses had turned into a major part of Lewiston's economic identity. "It's a little bit difficult to explain to people what's going on," he told CBS, "but to me this is our identity as a community." Mr. Brennan was a guest on the "CBS This Morning" program on Wednesday and was there to discuss Lewiston's fiscal crisis, which has become a major topic this week as the city prepares to hold bond referendums on Tuesday. You can listen to the full interview with Mr. Brennan here. It's tough to deny that Lewiston has been having a tough time financially. The city has a $16 million deficit and is facing the possibility of shutting down the police and fire departments. Lewiston's troubles are not unique. The economy has been sluggish in many states this year, and at this time last year, Maine was having a tough time making ends meet. The unemployment rate has not yet been formally released for the state, but when it is, it is expected to be roughly in the same territory as last year.Sri Lanka's first month as a member of the International Criminal Court ends with a death sentence passed on a former member of its armed forces.
