Transcription and processing factors in development and cell fate specification. Throughout embryonic development, cells are remarkably programmed to follow a precise cell fate, despite being exposed to a complex and dynamic extracellular environment. To achieve this, cells use transcription factor gene regulatory networks to instruct them on the appropriate developmental pathway. These gene networks are comprised of DNA-binding transcription factors that drive gene expression in a cell-specific manner, and a variety of RNA-binding proteins that fine-tune the expression and function of these factors. Recent advances suggest that a particularly large number of transcription factors are required to spatially and temporally control the formation of various tissue types during development. Here, we discuss recent progress in the field, focussing on the relative contributions of transcription and RNA processing factors to the early development of the mouse.

Q: Wordpress Pre-Published Posts Is Lost When Deleted I have a custom post type "book" which is pre-published. The problem is that when I delete the post, the changes don't show up when it is published again. I have to delete the published post, and recreate the book. How can I prevent this from happening? This is not a WP bug, or a problem in my code, because this problem is happening on a server located at the same location as this site. I don't know how to reproduce this on my localhost, as it is not on the same machine. It's like it doesn't have any memory of the changes I made in the database. Here's some code I made. There are

What have I been wearing to work lately? The answer is: This and that. I don't have a uniform. Although I like to make sure that I look good and that I like my clothes, I don't like the idea of waking up in the morning and dressing up. I'm a night owl and I get up slowly, at around 11 in the morning. When I get ready to leave the house, it is after midnight. And the most important thing of all is: I don't want to be seen dressed like this, every day. So while I spend a lot of time deciding what to wear, it's all I can do to finish my work, get up and do the washing.

Yet how can these changes be achieved? This article discusses the social and organizational challenges that are inherent to the implementation of open data models.
