I created the script to be a little more forgiving than in previous resizing scripts. The script adjusts the width to be at least 75% of the original and at most 90% of the original width. You can also use the 'convert' command to accomplish the same thing as seen below: Here the script is much shorter. You can see the first line of the script is 'convert'. Convert is a command that is a part of ImageMagick. You can also use the 'convert' command without the script. The script provides the variables to help make it
