Statue of a young Washington and future President, George Washington On this overcast day in late May, it seems that another weather vagrant is here to pass. Soon, the wind will whip up to a fair gale or so, in all probability. This weather vagrant didn't even drop by, 'Just to say Hello.' The sun is shining bright, and smiles are flitting, like butterflies. Though I've watched my friend, I've felt no loneliness for time being away. It's as if a fair breeze is blowing, to lift the spirits, while I stay at home. George Washington, in this air of release, never to return, stands with head bowed. It seems he is confident, he seems serene, as if knowing, time will soon be his./* * The MIT License * * Copyright (c) 2020, Mahmoud Ben Hassine (mahmoud.benhassine@icloud.com) * *

MidiGlass Player Application for Windows and Mac Free Download9 comments: Well, hey there, sugar. How are you doing in these cold weather days? How was the trip you took to Michigan? I know the air was a little chilly and I certainly agree with you about the garbage that's being spewed in our air (ok, I'm a little militant about it). Ah, our humanness is what interests me. It's part of the why we're here: the choices we make and the path we follow, not to mention our humor or lack thereof. And of course, our fears and love of life and everything in it. Isn't it great how when we live in different cities and countries, we can share our experience with each other in a very meaningful way? My deepest gratitude for your kindness. I like your blog. I would like to get to know you more. Please can we chat via email. I am becoming a dear friend to myself. My name is Carmela. My email is carmelavantepassi@yahoo.com Thanks.I have a blog, too, and would love to share it with you, I like your blog. carmelavantepassi@yahoo.com Thanks.I have a blog, too, and would love to share it with you, Hi Sugar! I've always had a soft spot for your posts and will continue to follow you with admiration. I am not one of those people who secretly hate the warm weather and Christmas, but I really think it is so, so much easier to think that way when
