7 Aug 2014 Acronis Backup & Recovery 2.0.0 update is available for download for the Mac OS X users. After the update, a new 'Planner' application has been added to download free license keys from aconinfo.com service. Firstly theQ: How to do two js.erb-MVC-lookups for one line of code I'm in the process of creating an app. As part of that, I'm using the "create" method of a resource, like so: resource.create(:name => "My new name", :url => "") Now, the way the form/submit works is that it posts to a separate URL within the app, like so: POST /my_domain/my_resource/new How, then, do I link back to the page from the form? Is there a way to do something like this: resource.create(:name => "My new name", :url => "") In other words, I have a line of code that I need to run once I've already POSTed to a URL in order to link back to the page from which the POST came. I feel like this is a very basic question, but I'm completely lacking in the Rails MVC-world. Thank you. A: You can call a controller method that renders a view and passes back the request/response context. You would call this method from your controller's create action. For example, # app/controllers/my_controller.rb def create resource.create(:name => params[:name], :url => new_my_resource_url(name: params[:name])) respond_to do lformatl format.js # or, other formats, if you want to do different things end end # app/controllers/my_controller.rb # Make sure you have the corresponding routes defined for # the new controller method class MyController // RUN: %cl
