Direct and indirect costs of dental care utilization in UK working-age adults. This study aimed to estimate the direct and indirect costs of dental care utilization in working-age adults in the UK and to compare the costs of different types of treatments. The sample comprised 1711 adults aged 19-64 years from the UK Clinical Practice Research Datalink (CPRD). One randomly chosen dentist extracted each subject's data for dental attendance in the past 2 years, and the corresponding costs were estimated using the CPRD's database and software. Detailed analyses were performed for the most common treatment types. The median annual cost was £475.53 (standard deviation [SD] £596.31), of which 92% was direct costs. More complex procedures (dentures and root canal treatment) were significantly more expensive, costing £690.84 (SD £1221.94) and £922.39 (SD £2036.33), respectively. Although a small proportion of subjects (3%) incurred costs of more than £1000 per year, 7.6% of the sample incurred at least one dental treatment costing £1000 or more in the past year. The cost of dental care is substantial in working-age adults in the UK. Further research is needed to estimate the cost of prevention of dental diseases, estimate the cost of oral health from a societal perspective and to
