After creating a runnable jar file and just running it with the extention from eclipse it wont run. The class is available and the.jar is created in the build path. All I want to do is run a jar file on another machine. I am using jre 1.8.0. I am trying to get this to work. I dont want a java runnable jar, I want the extention to be a jar file. A: From the JavaFX 2.0 Tutorial: The easiest way to distribute your application is to create a JAR file containing the files and classes from your project. Just create a JAR file as you normally would and put it into the root of your package: Right-click on your package and select 'Create JAR Archive' Choose a name for the JAR file and choose 'Create a new JAR file' Choose the root of your project as the archive Click 'Finish' Then you can just move the JAR file to your target platform and run it. Electronic devices such as mobile phones and portable multimedia players are becoming smaller and lighter. To meet such requirements, the batteries for powering the electronic devices must be smaller and lighter. Thus, a battery pack used in the electronic devices must be thin. Further, in a camera
