It is the only statewide bill still pending. The vote was 85 to 52, with Republicans calling the bill "unconstitutional," and Gov. Bob McDonnell says he will take it to the court. On the other side, there were supporters calling the bill "a love story, the story of America," and the state's first law on the definition of the term "marriage." The Senate has voted to approve a bill to allow Virginia to become the 14th state to legalize same-sex marriage. Much of the debate was personal. House Speaker William J. Howell (R-Stafford) took to the floor to ask why "we are here at this moment" in the legislative session, and the debate turned to "all of us who have loved someone of the same sex." "These are people that have truly enriched the lives of us all," Howell said. Democrats pointed out Virginia would be the first state in the nation to allow gay marriage. "We have come to that point where this is the time to do it," said Rep. Duane Crutchfield of Fauquier County, the sponsor of the measure. "And it's time to do it now, because you want your grandchildren to know that, too, about where we have been in terms of progress." The bill, a direct response to the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in June to strike down bans on gay marriage in all states, was originally
