With Host File Editor you can edit the host file (locally or network) on your system/computer and change the name resolution of your system to any other name than you can find on the internet. Using the proxy of this program, you can use the proxy service and change the IP addresses directly on the hosts file itself. 1. Extract HCE (Host File Editor) - unzip file - run HCE.exe - the Host File editor is opened 2. Use the editor to edit the hosts file 3. IMPORTANT! Don't save the file if you use notepad! - it leads to conflicts if two or more users edit the same file - please use notepad++ to edit - Open the hosts file (on your system) - Find 127.0.0.1 and remove it - Save - Close notepad++ 4. Start Host file Editor - go to Start - search for notepad++ - click on it and open it - find HCE and start it - wait for the Host File Editor to load 5. create a new hosts file - NOTE: When creating this file, open it in Notepad++ 6. edit the new created hosts file. - enter the IP address of your new server. - Save 7. close HCE 8. go back to Notepad++ - and use CTRL+S - to save the file 9. close Notepad++ 10. use CTRL+F to find the new Host file on your desktop. - and send it to your new server! Once you have installed and opened your freeware, you can close the executable and the Host File Editor appears in your Start menu under Start > Internet > Host File Editor. Clicking on it will open the Host File Editor. The Host File Editor is a rather elementary application. The interface is rather clean and uncluttered - even with a few buttons on it. A single big button is used to add or edit entries for hosts. Clicking on it brings up the field for adding or editing your host file. When you are done, click the 'GO' button. From this point on, your host file is refreshed and all assigned IP addresses and hostnames are automatically adjusted accordingly. If you find this too complicated, you can just hit the 'GO' button with nothing

What's New in the Host File Editor?

In this article we will be talking about Host File Editor, which is the best tool that you can use for editing the host file. As you will be able to understand from the name of the application, it is a very simple application that enables you to access and edit the host file. However, it does have a few things that make it special. To begin with, it is available as a portable application, which means that it can be run from any storage media without needing to install it on the system. The interface is very easy to use, with no need for any knowledge of programming to be able to use the application. What's more, the application can work effectively in network environments, allowing the users to easily edit the file on any network computer. [url=] A computer on the local intranet might have several IP addresses assigned to it, depending on which area of the network it is located on. One of the main uses of a host file is to correct this situation. In many cases, computers have a single IP address assigned to them, and the administrator would like to change this. However, this change requires a bit of technical know-how, since the system does not let you edit the IP address directly. Luckily, there is a software that can handle this need very easily. This software is called Host File Editor and it is available for both Mac and Windows. Here are some of the features of this program. 0 comments or reviews (yet) No votes yet. Host File Editor for Mac - 4.0.309900 About Host File Editor As you all know, the IP address is the identifier of the computer on the network. If you have a computer on the local network and it has multiple IP addresses assigned to it, then that means there are multiple computers connected to the network. The local network administrator usually assigns one IP address to the computer on the local network, such as 192.
