Desktop Icon Toy With License Key [32|64bit]

Various layouts to make it suit your style After installation, the application places an icon in the System Tray which gives you the power to modify its settings on the go, but also open the main interface of the app. Basically, Desktop Icon Toy has dedicated options to change the hover effect and enable a so-called "dancing icon", but also to switch to a different icon size and animation. But what's the most impressive is definitely the "Layout" tool. You can thus pick from one of the built-in layouts, be they clock, heart, spiral or pentagon, and arrange the icons on the desktop according to the shape you select. Mouse gestures and hotkey configuration So, if you go for the clock shape for instance, Desktop Icon Toy automatically refreshes the desktop and changes the layout to show you the correct time as seconds go by. Other than that, you can enable mouse gestures to arrange icons, set up hotkeys to align icons on the go using predefined settings, hide icons and text, change colors and backgrounds, lock the app with a password and customize the tray menu. Desktop Icon Toy automatically saves your layout before switching to a new one, so it's pretty easy to revert settings. Plus, you can define shortcuts to jump from one layout to another on the go. >Organize your desktop icons through different layouts >Customize the way your desktop icons look >Add the "dancing icon" feature >Save your setup for later use >Mouse gestures and hotkey configuration >Lockscreen password >Hide icons and text >Customize tray menu >Define shortcuts to jump from one layout to another Good app with some bugs. I have most things set up how I want it, but the clock and temp have issues. The clock looks good, but the temp increments only every 30 seconds, instead of every hour. Also, when the app starts up, it says "Loading settings..." for quite a while, and I have to hit refresh about 10-20 times before it starts to work. But still, it's a useful tool.
