Bluffing in poker could be defined as deliberately making poker hands that you actually don't have, though when you are waiting for a betting round to begin it is easier to bluff than with some other forms of games. The aim of bluffing in poker is to provoke your opponent into putting more money into the pot, which might be to your advantage. Also, bluffing can be a risky strategy, in case your opponent has one more big-stacked, and you make the wrong hand. Obviously, you do not want to make a big bluff, or your opponent might go all-in.
