The Mirror-based therapy described and evaluated by the present inventor is a novel system for improving patients' perception of their condition and resultant attitude and behavior. The System provides mirror therapy as a tool, which is suitable for use by any therapist with the capacity to provide mirror therapy.

The Mirror-based Therapy described and evaluated by the present inventor is applicable for patients undergoing or having completed treatment for stroke and brain injuries, such as acute subdural hematoma and intracerebral hemorrhage. (See, for example, U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,827,287, 5,445,146, 5,282,797, 5,855,636, 6,408,197, 6,448,955, 6,296,016, and 6,418,308 as well as U.S. patent applications 20060180212, 20060079350, 20040060075, and 20060039428) For example, there are at least twenty-three different subtypes of stroke, including at least four types of subdural hematoma, which can be pathologically and technically differentiated. Examples of the different subtypes of stroke include: acute ischemic stroke; subarachnoid hemorrhage; brain swelling (referred to as pseudotumor cerebri); and cerebral infarction. The invention described in the '187 patent is a novel system for improving patients' perception of their condition and resultant attitude and behavior, using a pair of mirrors that the patient views during and following conventional therapy treatment. The system is delivered by the therapist for a period of time that is determined by the patient's ability to participate, therapist's preference, and the severity and type of patient's problem. The following discusses some important aspects of the present invention in further detail. the management of asthma, cold, fever and respiratory infection. Phytonutrients are natural compounds found in plants and fruits that provide important nutrients to the human body, including antioxidants that help your body regulate its natural antioxidant levels. Antioxidants play an important role in defense against the formation of free radical molecules, which can harm your cells. The following are examples of phytonutrients that may have positive effects for treating cold and flu symptoms: Studies in humans and animals have shown that probiotics play an important role in maintaining gut health.
