Infectious complications are a frequent and often a fatal complication of peritoneal dialysis. Acute diffuse peritonitis is the most important cause of morbidity and mortality during treatment with continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis. This review focuses on prophylaxis of diffuse peritonitis and on therapeutic strategies. The review provides an overview of the pathophysiology of infectious peritonitis and the use of prophylactic antibiotics and chemotherapy. The use of strategies to reduce the invasiveness of the treatment and the use of allogeneic peritoneal dialysis are discussed. Bias in evaluations of a medication formulary in nursing practice. A clinical nurse consultant used a Medication Use Evaluation Form (MUEF) in an effort to assist with the prescription of long-term medications for nursing home residents. The frequency, type, and severity of medication side effects were examined and compared to the MUEF. 1cb139a0ed
