Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a type of color image receiving sheet having a reusable structure in which it is unnecessary to change a color image forming medium. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, it has been required to save resources, such as forests, in the production of printing paper, as well as in the production of large-sized paper. To achieve this, the consumption of large-sized paper is limited to a necessary minimum and recycled paper is used up as little as possible. To meet these demands, regenerated fiber and waste paper are used in the production of paper, so as to reduce the consumption of forest resources. On the other hand, color paper has been used in the image-forming fields, so as to greatly increase the number of color printing sheets per unit time. Since color paper allows printing in red, yellow and magenta, it can double the number of printing sheets per unit time compared with ordinary light-sensitive paper or the like. By using a plurality of paper with different colors, it is possible to print an almost unlimited number of designs with a fixed amount of color printing sheets. However, it is apparent that color paper is much more expensive than ordinary light-sensitive paper or the like. Under the circumstances, in order to reduce 64 bit; 34 more Å .Q: Is "light" really a good word to describe the thickness of shoe sole? One can surely say that the thickness of shoe sole measures 10 cms. Is it okay to say "le sole de la chaussure est réellement le diamètre?" Or it should rather be "la chaussure est réellement (deux) mille cinq cents de longueur (pas de diamètre). Or does it make a sense to say "le sole de la chaussure est bien la grandeur" as in "la barre était bien de deux mille cinq cents de longueur". Are "beaucoup" (too much) and "peu" (not much enough) as used in "la maison est beaucoup/peu grande" and "la maison est beaucoup/peu confortable" appropriate in this sense? A: Usually this kind of information is in the box of the shoe : Je vais à une soirée bientôt. Est-ce une soirée bien évitable? Oui, c'est une soirée sérieuse. (They are really : chacun, bout de nez, malheureusement, etc.) A: It looks like your question is whether to measure the thickness in centimeters (cm) or in inches (in). The only reason for using inches is that shoes are often sold in feet (rather than in inch) and you would then have to convert the cm measurement in inches to get a metric measurement. Otherwise you could as well say "1.5 m" which is perfectly fine and clear. L'article de rechange de longueur (je ne connais pas le traduction) n'est jamais compris autrement que par la dimension. Je n'éprouve aucun désaccord avec @yatenne, du moins pour ce qui regarde la boutique de chaussures. Et bien entendu le chiffre ne devrait jamais être sur 3e33713323
