I don't have anything like this before, but I need to create a HTML form to accept visitors names and email addresses. The form will be submitted through my server to mail-store.com. I have a relatively small amount of contacts in a database that are related to our web host names (webhostname.com, domain.com...). I want to send them an email with a html-code snippet that links them to the file on our server (domain.com/hostnames.html) that is meant to contain the code that fills the form and email it. I need to send a form, code, excel sheet that will help me to solve the problem. There is need to be a workaround for some differences in scripting languages/frameworks so I would like to try some scripting languages such as Java. I need to add a simple function to a WordPress plugin where each category or sub-category are assigned to an e-mail address or an address group in a local 'opt in' database where the e-mail and the addresses are unique and each category/sub-category link should be unique in order to be tracked I need to add a simple function to a WordPress plugin where each category or sub-category are assigned to an e-mail address or an address group in a local 'opt in' database where the e-mail and the addresses are unique and each category/sub-category link should be unique in order to be tracked I need to add a simple function to a WordPress plugin where each category or sub-category are assigned to an e-mail address or an address group in a local 'opt in' database where the e-mail and the addresses are unique and each category/sub-category link should be unique in order to be tracked I need to add a simple function to a WordPress plugin where each category or sub-category are assigned to an e-mail address or an address group in a local 'opt in' database where the e-mail and the addresses are unique and each category/sub-category link should be unique in order to be tracked I need to add a simple function to a WordPress plugin where each category or sub-category are assigned to an e-mail address or an address group in a local 'opt in' database where the e-mail and the addresses are unique and each category/sub-category link should be unique in order to be tracked

The problem is that this only works if the page has changed in size or position. $(window).scroll(function() { // do something }); Is there any other way to detect this event? A: Have you tried window.addEventListener('scroll', function() { /*... */ })? You can then use event.target to find out which element you are scrolling. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an electrical connector, and more particularly to an audio jack mounted in an audio device. 2. Description of the Related Art According to related art, a conventional audio jack is mounted in a printed circuit board (PCB) and is electrically connected to conductive pads formed in the PCB, so that the audio jack and the PCB communicate with each other. The conventional audio jack has an outer housing, a movable contact piece, a fixed contact piece, and an actuating member. The outer housing is mounted in the PCB and has a plurality of locating tabs, which define holes on the PCB for receiving screws to secure the audio jack on the PCB. The movable contact piece is mounted in the outer housing and has a plurality of elastic arms. Each elastic arm defines a resilient portion at a distal end thereof and a contacting portion at a proximal end thereof, the contacting portions abut against the conductive pads of the PCB. Each elastic arm also defines a locating hole. The fixed contact piece is mounted in the outer housing and is spaced apart from the movable contact piece by a predetermined distance. The fixed contact piece is a conductive sheet having a plurality of contacting portions aligned in parallel, each of the contacting portions is located at a corresponding position corresponding to each of the locating holes. The actuating member is mounted between the fixed contact piece and the movable contact piece and is movable between a first position where the resilient portions of the movable contact piece and the fixed contact piece abut against each other and a second position where the contacting portions of the movable contact piece and the fixed contact piece are in contact with each other. The actuating member is a lever pivoted on the movable contact piece. When the lever is at the
