1. Using the Bridge, select the Thumbnail of the Photoshop file and press Ctrl+I (Windows) or Command+I (Mac OS). You can view the image in high resolution by pressing the Enter key (Windows) or Return key (Mac). The big icon in the top-left corner of the window shows the zoom level. Photoshop projects an image of about 5 x 7 inches at 300 dpi, so you can zoom in and out of the image to examine close-ups of the image. If the image size is not 5 x 7 inches, or if the resolution is anything less than 300 dpi, you see a cropped version of the image. 2. Click the word New to create a new document and use the image you want to work with as your canvas. Photoshop does not create a new file when you press the New button. 3. Choose File ⇒ Save. You see the save options dialog box, shown in Figure 3-3, that has several tabs that you can work with: * If you want to name the file, select the File Name tab and type the name for your file. Then click Save to save it to the folder you've chosen. Figure 3-3: You can use this dialog box to change the settings of the save file. * If you want to change the size of the file, check the box next to the number for the chosen size. Click OK to save the file. * If you want to set your preferences for how the file is saved, check the boxes next to Create new originals, Create a backup copy, and Save as type. Then click OK. * If you want to work with a group of images, select the folder that contains the images you want to work with. You can drag an image from the Photoshop interface directly into the folder window or into another open window. Click OK to save the file and close the dialog box. 4. Click Layer 1 on the Layers panel. A new, blank layer appears. 5. Create a new layer by pressing Ctrl+Alt+Backspace (Windows) or Command+Option+Backspace (Mac). The Layers panel shows the new layer on top. A blank layer can have text or other elements, such as WordArt,

Adobe InDesign is a page layout program that allows you to create print and digital publications. It is more intuitive than other options and has a range of features that will suit all levels of users. Adobe Illustrator is a page layout program designed for users looking for a simple way to get professional-looking publications. Unlike InDesign, Illustrator doesn't have a lot of its own features. Instead, it uses its design tools to build the content of a project. Adobe Flash Pro is a professional vector graphics editor program. It has most of the features of a traditional drawing tool and can also work with 3D designs. It works on several platforms including web browsers.

Q: How to provide a userlist only to the owners of pages in sharepoint 2013 and restrict access to modify the pages I want to create a custom application in sharepoint 2013 to provide a userlist only to the owners of pages and/or site-collection-level users. I don't want to restrict my access to pages for modifying them. I just want to assign a specific list/group of users to them so that I can navigate them without any authentication needed. I am new to sharepoint development and not sure how to achieve that. So far I have done the following. Created a feature and turned on the required permissions for that feature. Created a "Owners" group in my AD. Created a powershell script to list all the users from the AD in Sharepoint and store them in a variable. Now what I do is i edit pages and provide the full login url of the page in the web config and then simply navigate the newly created "Custom" userlist from any site that is not managed by me in that site collection. Is this a correct way to achieve this? Thanks in advance

A: First thing, don't use Features to control permissions. Features allow you to impact what happens when a site is deployed. You shouldn't be "adding" permissions with Features. You should be installing a User Profile Service Application, which will create a

Content DB, registry, and a user profile service app on the server and then users will be created. Users will be created in AD from sync to SharePoint, so in the mean time you create users in AD. Then you create a "Custom User List" in SharePoint. I will not walk you through that here (there are 05a79cecff

Q: How to convert a "dotted" string in sql server I have a datetime column in my database. The time part is stored in the format 'hh:mm:ss.0' I need to make a query to get all the rows which have specific period, for example the query is SELECT a FROM table where a.DateTime is equal to '6:00:00.180' but the column a.DateTime is a text which has this dotted format, I need to compare it to the date '6:00:00.180' Any idea to convert it to the date? A: Use the CONVERT() function EXECUTE('CONVERT(datetime, ''' + @strDate + ''', "yyyyMMddhhmmss.0")') This function will convert a string representing a date/time value to a date/time data type.
