The Los Angeles Angels on Tuesday ordered former New York Yankees manager Joe Girardi to stay away from the team facility in California while he awaits discipline from Major League Baseball over his controversial reference to racial slurs, according to The Associated Press. The Angels extended Girardi's suspension beyond his original five-game suspension without pay. "The club has communicated to the player directly on multiple occasions that he is not to enter our facility until he has completed his discipline under the Basic Agreement and the Joint MLB-MLBPA Disciplinary Committee," the team said in a statement to the AP. "We are concerned by the message that the player's statements send to the industry and to our fans and are disappointed by the player's continued inappropriate and inappropriate conduct. We expect the player to show respect for our players, the game and the position." Girardi, the former Tampa Bay manager, was suspended after a profane outburst during a December home loss to the Oakland A's, which was captured by an Oakland television camera. MLB said the Yankees would be fined the maximum of $20,000. Girardi said there was "no excuse" for his profane outburst after the Yankees' ace, Masahiro Tanaka, pitched into the seventh inning in a 4-1 defeat that snapped their 15-game winning streak. Girardi, who is black, will not be welcome at Angel Stadium while the league determines whether he should be suspended for what the commissioner's office called "the use of inappropriate language when referring to a player's national origin, and/or a previous manager's purported implication that a player is not playing well because of his race." The suspension covers all of Girardi's activities in the major leagues and includes travel, including the use of any team planes, buses or lodging. The Yankees issued a statement saying they support Girardi's "expression of displeasure with our own teammate's performance." The Yankees fired Girardi after the 2015 season, but rehired him last week after he served as a special assistant to general manager Brian Cashman. "It's a new situation," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said Monday before the team returned home to New York. "I haven't had a whole lot of involvement in it so far. But, again, I support Joe. He's a good coach.
