Efficient suppression of malignant hyperthermia in swine by local application of the anti-arrhythmic drug, flecainide. The relative merits of systemic and local routes of administration of flecainide in the suppression of malignant hyperthermia were examined in 10 female Yucatan miniature swine. Mefloquine was utilized as the trigger agent. Local application of flecainide into the heart via the myocardium was more effective than intragastric administration of the drug in providing protection against the skeletal muscle hypermetabolism and the subsequent life-threatening events. Additionally, a positive relationship between the plasma flecainide concentration and the suppression of malignant hyperthermia was found. Amidst the rising rates of suicide in the southern state, Andhra Pradesh Chief Minister Chandrababu Naidu on Tuesday ordered the construction of suicide-free zones across the state. He also directed the District Collectors to identify vulnerable areas in their respective districts and erect hoardings to warn people about the dangers of suicide. "I have decided to erect hoardings across the state, along with community warning plaques, to urge people who commit suicide to come back to the family and to rehabilitate themselves with the help of a counsellor," Naidu said. This is Naidu's first such step since he took over as the chief minister. In the previous government, the suicide rates had dropped by just two per cent, making the state to rank third among the states in India for the maximum suicides, reported a Times of India report. When asked about the initiative, he said, "If someone was depressed or mentally disturbed, but didn't go for help, I did not think it is right for me to direct the District Collector to put up hoardings. I would rather suggest the Collector to identify vulnerable areas and erect hoardings in the area. It would be beneficial if someone comes to know about the situation, reaches out and communicates with family members to come back to the family life." Sampoorna Seshadri Mayil
