linear accelerator irradiation as assessed by MRI. To evaluate volumetric changes of the brainstem critical organs at various radiation dose levels and at various intervals after radiotherapy by using magnetic resonance imaging (MRI). This retrospective study was approved by the institutional review board. Forty-four brainstem critical organs (caudate, thalamus, globus pallidus, red nucleus, substantia nigra, pons, medulla oblongata, and cerebellum) of 20 patients (11 men and 9 women; mean age, 56 years; range, 42-69 years) who had been treated using linear accelerator (LINAC) irradiation for brainstem lesions were evaluated. The Dose volume histogram (DVH) of each organ was used to determine the percentage of the total volume receiving a certain dose. A dose-volume histogram of the brainstem critical organs was obtained at various intervals after radiotherapy. The ipsilateral and contralateral volumes of the brainstem critical organs were significantly reduced 24 months after radiotherapy. The contralateral volumes of the caudate and medulla oblongata significantly increased 24 months after radiotherapy. The caudate of the brainstem was exposed to a greater radiation dose at 24 months than at 12 and 36 months after radiotherapy ( $P = .004$ ). There was a strong correlation between the initial exposure dose and contralateral volume reduction ( $P$  The impact of an electronic teaching aids (ENTA) on the knowledge acquisition of nursing students: the case of Tahiti. This article reports on the impact of the use of an electronic teaching aid (ENTA) on the cognitive capacity of nursing students. ENTAs, a new educational tool, have been developed to help learners achieve a minimum level of competence on complex subjects. This evaluation concerned two groups of students. One group (ENTA group) participated in the ENTAs course and the other (CONV)
