That's the question hanging in the air in the UK. German TV have been broadcasting reports that he's been banned from wearing a headscarf on stage. A European Union law says that Muslim women cannot be forced to wear the hijab or any other religious or ideological symbols. The law says that anyone working in the public sphere should not make such demands. But he said he wants to wear a headscarf and that he shouldn't be banned. This is the latest in a string of issues surrounding the Muslim convert and 1cdb36666d standard way to handle a `resolve/reject` Promise chain on a Redux action? I'm trying to learn Redux (and the new async-await only ES7 goodness) so I've been looking for best practices and the one thing I haven't been able to find is a canonical way of handling the following: // actions.js export const itemSelectAction = () => async (dispatch) => { let item = await dispatch(selectItemFromStore()) let response = await dispatch(fetchItem(item)) dispatch(success(response)) } // index.js dispatch(itemSelectAction()).then(response => dispatch(success(response))) .catch(() => dispatch(error())) // reducers.js case
