"Digital innovation is vital to the future of the sport," said David Rutter, senior director of game development at Electronic Arts. "As an important part of EA's sports initiative, FIFA is a great example of a global entertainment franchise that can harness the power of real player feedback to enrich the experience for players." The new next-generation "HyperMotion" engine, powered by the next-generation engine, "FIFA 20," was designed to closely replicate the authentic feeling of playing FIFA games. FIFA 22 includes brand-new enhancements, including the introduction of four new player cards representing a wide variety of the world's greatest players in their prime. FIFA 22 is available now for Xbox One, Xbox One X, PlayStation®4, PlayStation®4 Pro and PC. The base game, FIFA Ultimate Team, is available now for Xbox One and the Xbox One X. The Xbox One and Xbox One X will be available on May 7, and FIFA Ultimate Team will be available on May 11.
