Agents assigned to the Ajo Station observed a group of Guatemalan nationals walking illegally along the border near the Naco Port of Entry. After an immigration interview, the agents learned the group had illegally entered Mexico and spent the night inside a small makeshift tent. The following morning, agents encountered a second group of

Guatemalan nationals as they illegally attempted to enter the U.S. Agents discovered two of the migrants had previously crossed the border and received visas to enter the U.S. from the San Luis regional immigration office. Tucson Sector agents transferred the two Guatemalan nationals to U.S. Border Patrol agents, who interviewed each of them. The agents learned the Guatemalan nationals did not want to seek asylum in the U.S. because they feared they would be sent back to Mexico. Agents prepared both men for prosecution and sent them
