I'm using web chat for my project and I need to know if it is possible to know if the jQuery code is re-executed, or the same code block is re-executed. This is a necessary step to avoid some script conflict, or at least know if there is some script conflict. Thanks in advance for your help. A: You can't, at least not in the general case. The point of jQuery is that it usually runs only once, even if it has to be called multiple times. Once jQuery has been loaded into the page, there's nothing really that can tell it not to do it again. What you can do is to run it again through a test function. The present invention is directed to toner compositions and, more specifically, to toner compositions containing toner particles with a novel crosslinked polymer shell that serves as a heat fuse to prevent inadvertent release of toner particles from the toner cartridge. The present invention is also directed to a toner developer composition comprised of toner particles with a novel crosslinked polymer shell; at least one toner additive, such as wax; and polymers selected to obtain a desired toner fusing latency. Thermal printers and copiers, which are used in business machines, are well known in the art. According to a conventional process, a latent image is produced on a photoreceptor by exposing it to laser beams. This latent image is developed with toner and then transferred to a recording medium, such as a paper sheet, in a direct method or an indirect method in which an intermediate transfer medium is utilized. The transferred image is then fixed to the paper by heating the toner image with a fuser roller using heat or a combination of heat and pressure. When the image is fixed, the toner particles are not separated from each other but stick together to form a single body
