Q: How can I remove missing data in a set of data using pandas? I have a pandas dataframe where some of the entries have not been recorded:
sample data: MONTH PHONES CSC 12 2012Q1 TEL1 1 11 2012Q1 TEL2 1 13 2012Q1 TEL3 1 12 2012Q2 TEL4 1
Expected output: MONTH PHONES CSC 12 2012Q1 TEL1 1 11 2012Q1 TEL2 1 13 2012Q1 TEL3 1 12 2012Q2 TEL4 1

I have tried some of the solutions here (removing a column from a dataframe if it is None), but they didn't produce the output I was looking for.

A: Here is a function to achieve this:

def clean(df):
    non_null_df = df.dropna(how='any') non_null_df['CSC'] = non_null_df['CSC'].apply(lambda x: x if len(x) > 0 else np.nan)
    return non_null_df

Which we can apply to the dataframe

df['CSC'] = df['CSC'].apply(lambda x: x if len(x) > 0 else np.nan)
df = clean(df)

Resulting in MONTH

Whilst the Spanish driver then went on to claim his second title at the wheel of the Ducati at the end of the season, he was also on top of the timesheets in the last two races of the year which saw him win the European title by five points over Andrea Iannone who ended up third. The margin of victory for Hamilton was 46 points over Ducati's Andrea Dovizioso. As the Superbike championship went into a three-way battle at the front for the title, Honda's Marc Marquez ended up beating teammate Dani Pedrosa by 25 points, and Ducati's Andrea Dovizioso was third, 33 points behind Pedrosa. You are right. We will change the table name and then point out what needs to be done. However if the table is named List and the column names are type and style_name then naming the table List is exactly the same as to say to code "select * from List" and we have a perfectly appropriate error message for that. It's more complicated than this really. I will probably make it more complicated than necessary. I can see I will need two tables and the pivot between them. What I do know is that after I have completed the page as you described I will upload and that will create a page with a table in it. I know what I want but I do not have a schema at all. Why? Because I have not asked the question before and I don't yet know what the answer will be. So you can use trial and error and when you have got the table you want in place then ask the question. Well we did have a question ask form. However the question that came up the most was: In SQL Server 2008 how can I keep the existing table schema structure when updating the data. It was ticked as a necessity but there was no explanation why. The most common question is: How do I recover the existing table structure when trying to add a new column. How do you get a schema using SQL Server Management Studio to match the database that is made for a website. For example if I want to create a table, in the table that is made for the website called products, how can I make it look like the actual database. Firstly you need to have an existing website project. We create one by clicking on File and then New Website. After creating the website you Porsche drivers Andre Lotterer and Nick Tandy and Toyota's Mitch Evans and Joel Eriksson all retired from the event, with Evans the first of the four to pull over. As they left the pits, the four tyres of the four leading drivers came up for inspection and were found to be worn and thus illegal for racing.

This was the result of a tyre regulation change since the beginning of the season, which was announced by the FIA a day earlier. The change now only allow tyres with a rating of 175/60 R19 to be used in the race. The race was red-flagged and all four leading drivers were handed penalties for infringement of regulations with Tandy receiving the most severe penalty, a five-second penalty for "spitting" (passing under the safety car). Button, having slipped to sixth in the drivers' championship standings, also won his third race of the season in Belgium, leaving the title race wide open. The race was held over 53 laps of the Circuit de Spa-Francorchamps, starting on Friday 31 August and ending on Saturday 1 September at 14:00 BST. The following day saw the first testing session for the 2014 FIA World Championship at the Nardo International Circuit in Italy. As had happened in all previous season's, the first session of the season was divided into a Friday practice and a Saturday qualifying session, the final of which would decide the grid positions for the following race. The Superpole qualifying session for the World Championship drivers was held on Saturday 2 September between 09:30 and 11:00 BST, with the grid for the race subsequently determined by the results of that session. Red Bull drivers Sebastian Vettel and Mark Webber were the top two qualifiers with their laps being demoted at the back of the grid to eighth and ninth place on the grid respectively for the following race. Red Bull rival Fernando Alonso took the third qualifying position in the session, while Mercedes driver Nico Rosberg and McLaren's Jenson Button completed the top six. Vettel set the fastest lap of the session to sit on pole position for the race, with Button ending up in third place. Red Bull teammate Webber trailed them with Webber eventually qualifying fourth, Alonso was fifth and Rosberg sixth. After the start of the race, Webber won the lead of the race from Vettel, while Jenson Button overtook Vettel into the first corner and held the second position. After six laps, the battle
