PIMP MY CHOPS My favorite Photoshop trick is to create a mask of a white silhouette in the background of your image, and once you have it looking the way you want it, use the Background Eraser tool to remove the white silhouette. With the mask being a solid color of your choice, you can now paint in black lines around the edges of the silhouette to create a realistic painting. This technique works well if the silhouette is a part of the subject that should be in focus or if you want to create a similar silhouette with the subject.

STRAIGHTENING THE HORIZON Another trick is to shoot pictures with a white board on a sunny day and you will have a whole set of images taken at different times of the day, each photo showing a different angle of the board. You can merge the photos in Photoshop, process each of them with the Posterize filter, and they'll look like several perspectives of a single image. You can then use the Lasso tool to mask out the whiteboard to remove it. Once you've done that, you can add the same whiteboard back into each picture, giving you a set of images that all look like the same one image with a different perspective. If you want to learn more about Photoshop, there are a few different brands that you can buy. If you don't want to spend money, you can also download the free version of Photoshop from the Adobe website to start tweaking your images. devices, designed to disrupt cellular and radio communications, can cause significant interference for consumers as they interfere with cellular systems, radio signals and GPS signals. Although the FCC has been trying to limit their presence and mitigate potential problems, it has been an ongoing effort as these small jammers continue to pop up. Ultimately, in order to protect the public's safety, the FCC has recommended that the public should be informed
