The sharpening tool works in a similar way, making the subject appear more clearly but it will be limited to only a few blur effects. 3. Gaussian Blur Many designers might not know that there's also a gaussian blur option available in Photoshop. The gaussian blur option is a basic, one-dimensional blur effect. It's not as smooth as the other blur tools in Photoshop but it lets you add a certain level of blurred edges to an image. 4. Cartoon It's no surprise that a tool for creating cartoons would be included in this list. The cartoon tool will let you add a cartoon style to your image by selecting areas of interest and then applying the cartoon effect to them. You can also combine different layers and easily flip the image to make it look like a flipbook. 5. Variability in the histopathology of gastric antral and pyloric mucosa is related to gastric emptying. Gastric acid and pepsin secretion may be elevated after vagotomy and gastric resection and correlated with clinical signs of gastric stasis. Because hypersecretion may contribute to the development of gastric ulcer, the relation of gastric emptying to gastric acid secretion and pepsin secretion was studied in 39 patients who had undergone distal gastric resection with vagotomy (group I) or who had undergone subtotal gastrectomy (group II) for carcinoma and 8 control patients. All patients were studied 5 and 14 months postoperatively. Gastric emptying was evaluated with scintiscanning in the first 10 min following a solid meal. Serum gastrin and pepsinogen I and II were measured at the first and second postprandial hour. Gastric acid and pepsin secretion were measured after an intragastric infusion of 0.1 N hydrochloric acid. The small gastric pouch in group I may undergo a delayed and hypomotile gastric emptying. Although there was no statistical difference in the gastric secretion of pepsinogen I and II between the two groups, the gastric acid output was significantly lower in group I than in group II. This reduction was more pronounced in patients with a delayed or hypomotile gastric emptying. Therefore, the relatively high pepsin output in group I may be a reflection of a preserved gastric acid secretion. { "_from": "lodash@>=3.10.1 =3.10.1
