it says, "This policy shall not apply if the insured loss is caused by fire (1) at an insured building if the policy covers such building on the effective date of this policy; or (2) to the structure of the insured building or any property added to the building but if such loss is caused by fire while the building or any property added to the building is vacant or unoccupied the policy shall cover therein." There is a "primary" fire policy that covers the entire building and the real property that is the "additional coverage" that covers the remainder of the building. Here, the appellant's "building," the insured property, had a mortgage in the amount of $250,000 on December 8, 2005, at which time the bank was the primary fire insurer.1 The mortgage was foreclosed and the property was sold for $635,000. She then obtained a "Second Mortgage insurance and a Fire and Casualty policy on the property" from the appellee. The appellant obtained this "Second Mortgage insurance" on March 10, 2006, a month before she obtained the appellee's "fire and casualty" policy, when the value of the property, including the mortgage, was substantially less than the $250,000. There is no indication that she obtained a "third-party" fire or casualty policy. According to the policy that she received from the appellee, the appellant's "Building" is insured for $250,000 if the "loss is caused by fire and then reinsured by the first-named insurer for an amount not less than $250,000." The "additional-coverage" language of the policy reflects this "re-insurance." The appellant's "loss" was not caused by fire, but instead was caused by foreclosure 1 To the extent that there was some confusion in the trial court, it was likely the result of the parties' failure to adequately explain the differences in these policies

What's New In?

Q: Java Input Multiple Values into Array I'm making a program in Java that allows the user to input data from 4 integers and creating an array from the 4 input, in Java, I used the code Scanner input = new Scanner(System.in); int[] array = new int[4]; array[0] = input.nextInt(); array[1] = input.nextInt(); array[2] = input.nextInt(); array[3] = input.nextInt(); But when I input 5, 6, 7, 8, the array holds the numbers as one and not as separate numbers. A: There are two problems. When you first read one number, there are no numbers left for the next reading, so "first problem" comes to the surface. You have to actually read values into the array, say: int[] array = new int[4]; while (input.hasNext()) { array[0] = input.nextInt(); array[1] = input.nextInt(); array[2] = input.nextInt(); array[3] = input.nextInt(); } Then, the second problem comes to the surface. You're reading a sequence of four numbers, but you only want to read four numbers. I don't know what you're trying to achieve, but this should work User inputs four integers After all input is done, you have an array of size four containing the input values. You could further debug that an input of 5, 6, 7, 8 would be User inputs five integers After all input is done, you have an array of size five containing the input values. It is done." "Koji:" "Anyway, did you decide what you're gonna do with this?" "Wish I hadn't asked that question, 'cause I don't know the answer." "Well, I was going to say," ""I will rely on myself to decide what to do with it,"" "but then I was like," ""Fuck it, I guess I'll keep it."" "I mean, what do you think?" "If I'm thinking about your work, I mean, clearly, I like it, but I also like seeing something by where you live." "And I guess I
